

Death of Mr. J. Dennis Wolfe.

Shortly before THE NEWS was ready for the press it was learned that Mr. J. Dennis Wolfe was dead. His death occurred shortly after 1 p. m., at his residence in the northern part of the city. The event was not unexpected, as it had been evident for several days past to his physician and family that he could not survive.

About two weeks ago he bravely submitted to the amputation of one of his feet as a last resort to check the progress of a disease that had begun in that member. Notwithstanding his advanced age, there was at first strong hope that he would survive the shock and recover, but his vital energies were not sufficient to sustain him, and all this week he had been slowly sinking into unconsciousness and death. The hour for the funeral has not yet been announced.
